Sofia and Liam, were brainstorming ideas for a community festival. They wanted to create an event that would celebrate the diversity of their town and bring people together, and after much thought, they decided to organize a “Harmony Festival.”

They wanted to ensure that everyone in Harmonyville felt welcome and appreciated. To achieve this, they decided to organize a “Cultural Exchange Fair” where residents could set up booths to share aspects of their heritage—whether it be through traditional attire, artifacts, or personal stories.

Sofia, who had roots in Brazil, wanted to feature lively samba music, vibrant Carnival costumes, and a taste of Brazilian cuisine.

The main square would be adorned with colorful decorations representing different countries, creating a visual tapestry of the town’s rich cultural tapestry.
